Plugged In: Using the Internet for High School (and Professional) Journalism

RTNDF's High School Journalism Project has released the second edition of "Plugged In: Using the Internet for High School (and Professional) Journalism." This bigger and better version is more than just an update of the first edition. In these pages, aspiring journalists can learn how to use the Internet as a powerful journalistic tool as well as learn about Internet privacy and security issues, how to get a news operation online and many more useful suggestions about the craft of journalism
